The following is an extract from a letter to me by Jim Paterson, HGA, BScn:

"All my best successes in auditing were those in which I used the control factors which you mentioned at the congress. All my worst failures were when I neglected them. It used to puzzle me when people got so well on just step A of 8-C, that I never got around to doing step B with many of my preclears. They got too well.

"I once ran a woman for fifteen hours on step A and she did not come back. She just 'phoned me to say that she had a job now and that she felt fine, and a week later to say that she had got a promotion, and that was that! I recently ran a man who had attempted suicide, on 8-C. I gave him about five hours after he gained consciousness. He felt fine at the end, went back to work within a couple of days, having helped a friend in the meantime, has not looked back since, and has been picked out by the manager of the place where he worked for training as a buyer."
